

1 ARAVIND SWAMINATHAN (admitted pro hac vice)
aswaminathan@orrick.com

2 REBECCA HARLOW (STATE BAR NO. 281931)
rharlow@orrick.com

3 THOMAS FU (STATE BAR NO. 325209)
tfu@orrick.com

4 ORRICK, HERRINGTON & SUTCLIFFE LLP
The Orrick Building
5 405 Howard Street
San Francisco, CA 94105-2669
6 Telephone: +1 415 773 5700
Facsimile: +1 415 773 5759

7 Attorneys for Defendant
8 Lead Intelligence, Inc. d/b/a Jornaya

9 JOSEPH O'KEEFE (pro hac vice application
10 forthcoming)

jokeefe@mcleodbrunger.com
11 MCLEOD BRUNGER PLLC
10375 Park Meadows Drive, Ste. 260
12 Lone Tree, CO 80124
Telephone: 720 443 6600

13 Attorney for Defendant
14 DDR Media, LLC on behalf of the proper Party to be Substituted DDR Media, LLC trading/doing business as 15 Royal Marketing Group

16
17 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
18 NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
19

20 LORETTA WILLIAMS, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

21 Plaintiff,

22 v.

23 DDR MEDIA, LLC, a Pennsylvania limited
24 liability company, and LEAD INTELLIGENCE,
INC., a Delaware corporation, d/b/a Jornaya,

25 Defendants.
26

Case No. 3:22-cv-03789-SI

DEFENDANTS DDR MEDIA'S AND JORNAYA'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION TO COMPEL ARBITRATION

Date: February 17, 2023
Time: 10:00 a.m.

Judge: Hon. Susan Illston

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
I. ARGUMENT.....	1
A. Plaintiff agreed to submit all claims arising out of or relating to her use of DDR Media’s website to binding arbitration.	1
B. Jornaya can enforce the arbitration agreement.	5
II. CONCLUSION.....	8

TABLE OF AUTHORITIESPage(s)*Cases

Berman v. Freedom Fin. Network, LLC , 30 F. 4th 849 (9th Cir. 2022)	2, 3
Dohrmann v. Intuit, Inc. , 823 Fed. Appx. 482 (9th Cir. 2020)	4
Franklin v. Cmty. Reg'l Med. Ctr. , 998 F.3d 867 (9th Cir. 2021)	6, 7
Garcia v. Pexco , 11 Cal. App. 5th 782 (2017)	6
Hicks Park LLP v. ING Bank, FSB , 2011 WL 5509097 (C.D. Cal. 2011)	4
Kindred Nursing Centers Ltd. P'ship v. Clark , 581 U.S. 246 (2017)	5
Lee v. Ticketmaster LLC , 817 Fed. Appx. 393 (9th Cir. 2020)	4
Martinez-Gonzalez v. Elkhorn Packing Co., LLC , 2022 WL 10585178 (N.D. Cal. 2022)	6
Metalclad Corp. v. Ventana Environmental Organizational Partnership , 109 Cal. App. 4th at 1713	6
Peter v. DoorDash, Inc. , 445 F. Supp. 3d 580 (N.D. Cal. 2020)	3
Pizarro v. QuinStreet, Inc. , 2022 WL 3357838 (N.D. Cal. 2022)	passim

Statutes

Federal Arbitration Act	5
-------------------------------	---

Plaintiff’s Opposition to Defendants’ Motion to Compel Arbitration (“Opposition” or “Opp.”) opts at nearly every opportunity to sidestep—rather than contest—the key issues. Plaintiff does not dispute, for instance, that the theories her suit advances would not only outlaw, but criminalize, the crucial tools relied on by nearly the entire online comparison shopping and “lead-generation” industry to comply with federal law. (Instead, she attempts to fault Defendants for not “admit[ting] wrongdoing.” Opp. 1.). She likewise does not dispute that the Terms of Use for snappyrent2own.com (the website she used to generate this lawsuit) contain a provision that unambiguously requires Plaintiff to submit all of her claims to binding, individual arbitration. (Instead, she claims that she is simply immune from that promise.) Nor does she dispute that arbitration provision applies—by its terms—equally to her claims against Jornaya as those against DDR Media.¹ (Instead, she simply insists that Jornaya is prohibited from enforcing them.) Plaintiff’s backwards arguments get it wrong at every turn. This Court should hold that the arbitration agreement applies according to its plain terms, and thus requires all of Plaintiff’s claims—against both Jornaya and DDR Media—to be submitted to binding, individual arbitration.

I. ARGUMENT

A. Plaintiff agreed to submit all claims arising out of or relating to her use of DDR Media’s website to binding arbitration.

Plaintiff does not dispute that the Terms of Use on snappyrent2own.com includes provision that that requires all of her claims to be submitted to binding, individual arbitration. See Mot. 6-7; Opp. 4. Instead, Plaintiff insists that she should be exempt from that agreement, because a hyperlink to those Terms was “not displayed in a conspicuous manner.” Opp. 5. As already explained in Defendants’ Motion (at 8-9), however, Pizarro v. QuinStreet, Inc., 2022 WL 3357838 (N.D. Cal. 2022), forecloses Plaintiff’s argument. Indeed, one need only line up the website interface in Pizarro (which was held to have “conspicuously” displayed a link to its Terms of Use) next to the website interface here to see that the two are materially indistinguishable.

¹ As noted in Plaintiff’s Opposition, “Plaintiff agrees that the complete name of Defendant DDR is DDR Media, LLC d/b/a Royal Marketing Group.” Opp. 1, n.1.

Rent to Own Your Home!

First Name

Last Name

Phone Number

Email Address

By clicking the "Get Started" button, I am agreeing by my electronic signature to give SnappyRent2Own, NHAProgram and its partners my prior express written consent and permission to send emails, as well as call and send to me recurring text messages at the cellphone number(s) I provided above and to any other subscriber or user of these cellphone number(s), using an automatic dialing system at any time from and after my inquiry to SnappyRent2Own, NHAProgram for purposes of all federal and state telemarketing and Do-not-Call laws. In each case to market to me products and services and for all other purposes. I understand that my telephone company may impose charges on me for these contacts. I understand that my consent is not required to buy any of these business's products or services and I can be revoked at any time. For SMS message campaigns: Text STOP to stop and HELP for help. Terms & Conditions/privacy policy apply. In addition, I agree to the Terms of Use and the Privacy Policy. I also authorize the auto dealers and financial institutions that receive my request to order my credit report to determine my creditworthiness. I understand that SnappyRent2Own, NHAProgram does not make credit decisions and is not a lender or broker.

CHECK LISTINGS

Figure 1 – snappyrent2own.com

Last step to get your quotes

Phone
PHONE ()

EMAIL

We encrypt your information using 256 SSL technology.

See My Rates

By clicking See My Rates, you agree to the following:
To AmOne's Privacy Notice, Terms of Use, and Consent to Receive Electronic Communications

To share my information with up to five potential callers, lenders, or debt relief partners, for AmOne, and for them and/or AmOne to contact you (including by automated dialing systems, prerecorded messages and text) for marketing purposes by telephone, mobile device (including SMS and MMS), and/or email, even if you are on a corporate, state or national Do Not Call list. Consent is not required in order to purchase goods and services and you may choose instead to contact a customer care representative at 1-800-781-5187.

You authorize AmOne to obtain your credit report and Social Security Number from a credit bureau to verify your identity and match you with up to five lenders or debt relief providers. You further authorize AmOne to provide to these lenders your full Social Security. You further authorize these lenders separately to obtain your consumer credit report, credit score, and other information from one or more consumer reporting agencies to verify your identity and provide you with quotes.

Figure 2 – Pizarro Interface

Plaintiff responds largely by discussing a different case, Berman v. Freedom Fin. Network, LLC, 30 F. 4th 849 (9th Cir. 2022). See Opp. 5-6. But Pizarro—which was issued after Berman—already explains (in a discussion wholly ignored by Plaintiff) why Berman is inapplicable here. See Pizarro, 2022 WL 3357838, at *3 (“Berman is distinguishable on its facts.”). Specifically, Pizarro explains that “the textual notice containing the ‘Terms & Conditions’ hyperlink in Berman was displayed ‘in a tiny gray font so small that it was barely legible to the naked eye,’ surrounded by ‘comparatively larger’ text that ‘naturally directed’ the user’s attention everywhere else,’ and ‘sandwiched’ between a ‘large green button with text that stated, in easy-to-read white letters, “Continue»,” and two other large buttons that allowed the user to ‘select a gender.”” Id. (quoting Berman, 30 F.4th at 854, 856-57). Additionally, “the textual notice [in Berman] was further deemphasized by the overall design of the webpage, in which other visual elements, including a

1 bright blue border and several fields requiring the user to input information, drew the user’s attention
 2 away from the barely readable critical text.” Pizarro, 2022 WL 3357838, at *3. But as Pizarro
 3 recognized, none of those was true of the interface in that case—and none is true of the interface on 4 snappyrent2own.com: Instead, both in Pizarro and here, the relevant hyperlinks are “primarily 5 surrounded by text no larger than the notice itself,” and “the general design of the webpage[s], which 6 [are] comprised of only [a few] data fields, is relatively uncluttered and has a muted, and essentially 7 uniform, color scheme,” thereby avoiding the eye-catching distractions that Berman found fatal. Id.
 8 At bottom, Pizarro itself already accounts for Berman—and indeed, explains in detail exactly why,
 9 under Berman, both interfaces pictured above reflect a “conspicuous” link to the Terms of Use that 10 is sufficient to render them binding. 2022 WL 3357838, at *3.

11 Where Plaintiff does engage with Pizarro directly, her attempt to parry that decision boils
 12 down to playing up three minor differences between the interfaces in that case and in this one. All 13 of these fail.

14 First, her primary contention is that Pizarro does not govern here because the website in that 15 case involved a “white background,” whereas snappyrent2own.com used a light grey one. Opp. 7.
 16 Unsurprisingly, courts have rejected exactly this argument. See Peter v. DoorDash, Inc., 445 F.
 17 Supp. 3d 580, 586 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (compelling arbitration because, “[d]espite Plaintiff’s
 18 characterization of the font as gray-on-gray, the text [of the link to the Terms] contrasts clearly with 19 the background and is plainly readable.”); Pizarro, 2022 WL 3357838, at *3 (a link “adequately
 20 contrast[s]” with the background as long as a user would not “be required to ...aimlessly click words 21 on a page in an effort to ferret [it] out”).

22 Second, Plaintiff argues that the link to the Terms in Pizarro were more conspicuous than 23 the one here, because “unlike the [link to the] Terms at issue in this case, the Pizarro [link was] set 24 off [in] a separate sentence,” and “the first” link displayed on the webpage. Opp. 7. As an initial 25 matter, however, Plaintiff is wrong—twice over—in her characterization of the Pizarro interface:
 26 The link to the Terms in Pizarro was not “set off [in] a separate sentence,” but rather was included
 27 in the same sentence as the links to both the Privacy Notice and the Consent to Receive Electronic 28 Communications. See supra Figure 2. Moreover, the link to the Terms in Pizarro was not “the first”

link displayed on the webpage, but the second (after the link to the Pizarro Privacy Notice). See id.

Just as important, Plaintiff’s argument errs as a matter of law. There is no rule that where a website states that clicking a button will constitute assent to multiple hyperlinked agreements, only the first one counts. See Pizarro, 2022 WL 3357838, at *3 (compelling arbitration based on Terms of Use that was not separately set off in its own sentence, and was not the first link displayed on the page); see also Dohrmann v. Intuit, Inc., 823 Fed. Appx. 482, 484-85 (9th Cir. 2020) (same, and rejecting the argument made in dissent “[m]ore than one terms-of-use link on a sign-in screen by itself is enough to confound a reasonably prudent user”). The relevant question when determining whether a link was adequately conspicuous is thus not what order the link appears in as compared to other links, but whether Plaintiff “had a legitimate opportunity to review” the one at issue. Lee v. Ticketmaster LLC, 817 Fed. Appx. 393, 395 (9th Cir. 2020). And in that respect, the snappyrent2own.com website scores even higher than the Pizarro one: On snappyrent2own.com, the Terms of Use hyperlink is located above the button to proceed, meaning that a user cannot continue on to the next page without at least scrolling past the Terms of Use hyperlink. On the Pizarro website, by contrast, the Terms of Use hyperlink was located below the button to proceed, meaning that a user could have continued with their navigation without ever seeing the link to the Terms of Use at all. If anything, then, the hyperlink on snappyrent2own.com was even more likely to be noticed by a user than the one held to be binding in Pizarro.

Finally, Plaintiff contends that “the Pizarro disclosure specifies the method of agreeing to the Terms by clicking [the] ‘See My Rates’ button,” whereas “the same is not true in this case.” Opp. 7. Plaintiff does not dispute, however, that the disclosure on the DDR Media website begins by saying: “By clicking the ‘Get Started’ button, I am agreeing ...” to (among other things) be bound by the Terms of Service and Privacy Policy. See supra Figure 1. Instead, she maintains that because the large blue button at the bottom of Figure 1 actually reads “CHECK LISTINGS” instead of “Get Started,” this disclosure has no effect. But to “allow[] this technicality to defeat Defendant’s petition for arbitration would be in direct contradiction to public policy.” See Hicks |Park LLP v. ING Bank, FSB, 2011 WL 5509097, at *2 (C.D. Cal. 2011). The entire point of the inquiry is to determine whether a “reasonably prudent user” would have had “inquiry notice of the terms.”

1 Pizarro, 2022 WL 3357838, at *3. And here, there can be no serious dispute that, as a real-world
 2 matter, any user of snappyrent2own.com would have been just as aware of the Terms of Use,
 3 regardless of whether the button at the bottom of Figure 1 read “CHECK LISTINGS” or “Get 4 Started.”

5 What is more, Plaintiff’s argument, if accepted, would have sweeping and deleterious
 6 consequences. Huge swaths of websites have users manifest their assent to all kinds of terms—not
 7 just arbitration agreements, but also privacy policies, refund policies, payment terms, prohibited
 8 uses, just to name a few—by clicking a button. And as the Supreme Court has emphasized time and 9 again, the rules of contract formation must apply the same to all those agreements, whether they 10 involve arbitration or not. See, e.g., Kindred Nursing Centers Ltd. P’ship v. Clark, 581 U.S. 246, 11 248 (2017) (“The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA or Act) requires courts to place arbitration 12 agreements on equal footing with all other contracts.”). Plaintiff’s rule, therefore, would have the 13 effect of nullifying all of those agreements in their entirety on any website, any time there was even 14 a slight discrepancy between the text on the button itself and the descriptor of the button in the 15 relevant disclosure. That kind of absurd result is clearly not what the law requires.

16 B. Jornaya can enforce the arbitration agreement.

17 Plaintiff does not dispute that the plain text of the snappyrent2own.com arbitration 18 provision—which requires her to arbitrate “[a]ny dispute arising out of or in connection with ...
 19 [her] use of ... [DDR Media’s] Site,” Swaminathan Decl. Ex. 2—covers all of her claims against 20 Jornaya. Instead, she maintains that even if she entered into a binding, contractual obligation to 21 arbitrate all her claims against Jornaya, there is nothing that Jornaya (or this Court) can do to enforce
 22 that promise. See Opp. 8-11. As explained in Defendants’ Motion (at 10), that is exactly the kind 23 of gamesmanship that the doctrine of equitable estoppel is meant to avoid.

24 Plaintiff responds that the prerequisites of equitable estoppel are not met here, but only by 25 misstating the law. Specifically, Plaintiff asserts that “equitable estoppel only applies when the 26 signatory to a valid agreement containing an arbitration clause must rely on the obligations imposed
 27 by the underlying agreement in asserting its claims against the non-signatory.” Opp. 9. But DDR
 28 Media and Jornaya already explained—in a discussion entirely ignored by Plaintiff—that the Ninth

1 Circuit has rejected exactly that contention. See Mot. at 10, n.5. In fact, one of the very cases
 2 Plaintiff herself cites says—directly contrary to her argument—that equitable estoppel is not limited
 3 to claims that “sound in contract” or “involve the interpretation of [the] agreements” containing the 4 arbitration clause. Franklin v. Cmty. Reg’l Med. Ctr., 998 F.3d 867, 872 & n.3 (9th Cir. 2021)
 5 (quoting Garcia v. Pexco, 11 Cal. App. 5th 782, 788 (2017)), cited at Opp. 10. As that case made
 6 clear—by granting motion to compel statutory claims that did not rely on the agreement containing 7 the arbitration provision—a situation where “claims rely on the written agreement” is but one
 8 example of when equitable estoppel applies, not the only one. Id. at 874. Rather, as the Ninth Circuit
 9 explained in Franklin, equitable estoppel allows a nonsignatory to enforce an arbitration clause any 10 time “a signatory ... su[es] nonsignatory defendants for claims that [1] are based on the same facts
 11 and [2] are inherently inseparable from arbitrable claims against signatory defendants.” Id. (quoting 12 Metalclad, 109 Cal. App. 4th at 1713).

13 Here it is clear here that both of those conditions are met. As to the first requirement, Plaintiff
 14 does not even dispute that it is satisfied. See Opp. 10. (Nor could she, given that her entire Complaint
 15 “groups the two defendants together throughout.” Martinez-Gonzalez v. Elkhorn Packing Co., LLC, 16 2022 WL 10585178, at *9 (N.D. Cal. 2022); see also, e.g., Compl. ¶ 41 (“Defendants intentionally 17 tapped the lines of communication between Plaintiff ... and DDR Media’s website.”).) As to the 18 second, Plaintiff likewise does not dispute that her claims against Jornaya are completely derivative
 19 of her claims against DDR Media—so that if DDR Media is not liable, Jornaya is not either. See
 20 Mot. at 11; Opp. at 10. Instead, Plaintiff asserts only that her claims against Jornaya are not 21 “‘inherently bound up’ with the claims against” DRR Media because “each defendant violated the 22 statute by separate actions.” Opp. 10-11. But that proves far too much: Different defendants will 23 always take different actions to give rise to a plaintiff’s claims—and so Plaintiff’s position would 24 never allow equitable estoppel to apply. Unsurprisingly, the Ninth Circuit has refused to adopt such 25 a rule. Indeed, in Franklin itself, the court recognized that the signatory and non-signatory took 26 separate actions—with the non-signatory being accused of “altering [the plaintiff’s] time records to 27 show a meal period that was never taken,” or “requiring [the plaintiff] to perform substantial work 28 off-the-clock and without compensation,” whereas the signatory was merely “responsible for

1 reviewing the timekeeping records and raising any discrepancies” with the non-signatory. 998 F.3d
 2 at 875. (In fact, the Franklin plaintiff formally made “allegations ... leveled only at the [non-
 3 signatory] and not [at the signatory],” leaving the signatory out of the lawsuit altogether. Id.) Yet
 4 the Ninth Circuit had little trouble concluding that these technical quibbles were all irrelevant:
 5 Because “the substance of her claims” implicated both the signatory and non-signatory, the court
 6 concluded that “it would be unfair for [her] to avoid arbitration.” Id. So, too, here.

7 Plaintiff thus tells on herself when she insists that “should the Court compel Plaintiff to 8 arbitrate her claims against DDR, Plaintiff can and will replead her separate claims against Jornaya.”
 9 Opp. 11. That king of gamesmanship—“where a party to an arbitration agreement attempts to avoid 10 that agreement by suing a related party with which it has no arbitration agreement, in the hope that 11 the claim against the other party will be adjudicated first and have preclusive effect in the 12 arbitration”—is exactly what equitable estoppel was meant to stop. Franklin, 998 F.3d at 871
 13 (“[S]uch a maneuver should not be allowed to succeed”).

1 II. CONCLUSION

2 For the foregoing reasons, this Court should compel Plaintiff to submit her claims against
3 both DDR Media and Jornaya to binding, individual arbitration.

4
5 DATED: January 27, 2023

Respectfully Submitted,

6 ORRICK, HERRINGTON & SUTCLIFFE LLP

7
8 By: /s/ Aravind Swaminathan
9 ARAVIND SWAMINATHAN
10 Attorneys for Defendant, LEAD
11 INTELLIGENCE, INC. D/B/A JORNAYA

12
13 By: /s/ Joseph O'Keefe
14 JOSEPH O'KEEFE
15 Attorneys for Defendant, DDR MEDIA, LLC
16 ON BEHALF OF THE PROPER PARTY TO 17 BE SUBSTITUTED DDR MEDIA, LLC
18 TRADING/DOING BUSINESS AS ROYAL
19 MARKETING GROUP

Attestation re Electronic Signatures

I, Aravind Swaminathan, attest pursuant to Northern District Local Rule 5-1(i)(3) that all other signatories to this document, on whose behalf this filing is submitted, concur in the filing's contents and have authorized this filing. I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

Dated: January 27, 2022

By: /s/ Aravind Swaminathan
ARAVIND SWAMINATHAN